Animal Manager

“I have always had in mind the creation of a sound, practical, enterprise; preserving what is best in our country way of life, and based on sound, practical farming, as all country life must be.” - William Scott Abbott

The William Scott Abbott Trust is an educational charity committed to connecting people to agriculture through a variety of experiences in a diverse historic landscape.

Our vision is to create a thriving, innovative and enterprising agricultural education and rural skills “centre of excellence”.

Our programmes will transform participants’ relationships with food, forestry, fibre and farms.

Our mission is to inspire, nurture and promote countryside education. We will design and deliver authentic agricultural and outdoor experiences that nurture connections between families, farms, and food in East Anglia.

Sacrewell Farm and Country Centre, is the visitor face of the William Scott Abbott Trust which has shared farming and countryside learning for over 50 years. Our new business plan will see us providing year-round, farm-based educational programs for all ages.

The role of Animal Manager sits within the Site Operations Team, and works to provide effective leadership and management of all current and future livestock programs, ensuring the highest quality care is provided to all animals at all times. You’ll need to be comfortable working with animals of all sizes, from guinea pigs to heavy horses.

About 80% of this job is working outside and “hands-on”, but you also need to be comfortable with the back-office side of our business, including developing and managing the agriculture budget, overseeing marketing and sales of animals and animal products, and managing herd health, performance and related record-keeping.
